

Exploring Story through Art, Theater, and Writing with Christi Craig: Writer, Teacher, Editor

A writing course designed to expose participants to the importance of sharing your stories by exploring three different mediums of creativity: art, theater, and finally—putting pen to paper.

REGISTRATION

$95 for the entire course, which includes:

- 3 hours of writing workshops on creativity & story, with lessons on the personal essay and a take-home assignment.
- a reduced-fee ticket to the Saturday evening showing of Sabley Sabin’s three-act play, “everyone’s stories are true,” at Inspiration Studios.

From the synopsis for everyone’s stories are true: “the human experience is one of attempted connection – sometimes it works, and the words - the stories that we share – bring us together, bridging the gap between us. sometimes they fall short, landing between us as barricades. either way, shared or isolated, our stories – everyone’s stories – are true.”

- an opportunity to view Deb Maret’s art exhibit, “FAMOUS” in the gallery space at Inspiration Studios.
FAMOUS is a collection of portraits that encourages viewers “to redefine their ideas of fame and re-examine who they honor by giving them their time and attention.”
- an informal reading of participant’s written work and discussion on the process.

Participants will leave the course with a wider perspective on the way creative expression enhances our stories, with the beginning of a personal essay in hand, and with resources for fine-tuning an early draft of an essay into one that’s publication-ready.
